What you will be doing:

Work to make our Software Development Kit tools and documentation more efficient and easier to understand and use by our development community.

Write unit tests for the components and services to improve our coverage.

Work with our development team to build Angular components, services, and directives within the Epicor UI Framework.

What you will likely bring:

Fluent in English

Must have completed courses in computer logic / programming languages.

An understanding of HTML and web-based technologies is a plus.

Hands-on experience, through course work, with JavaScript is a plus.

Pursuing a Computer Science degree

About Epicor

At Epicor we know that success comes from working together. Everyone has a role to play, and it's the essential partnerships across our company that are crucial to our customers' success and our growth as a business.

We're truly a team. Working in close partnership, we bring wide-ranging talents together in powerful collaborations. We think innovatively, share our knowledge generously, and constantly learn from our colleagues. We're proud of the success we achieve every day, but we never stop challenging ourselves and encouraging each other. Together, we go further and imagine an even brighter future.

Whatever your career journey, we'll help you find the right path. Through our training courses, mentorship, and continuous support, you'll get everything you need to thrive. At Epicor, your success is our success. And that success really matters, because we're the essential partners for the world's most essential businesses—the hardworking companies who make, move, and sell the things the world needs.

Equal Opportunities and Accommodations Statement

Epicor is committed to creating a workplace and global community where inclusion is valued; where you bring the whole and real you—that's who we're interested in. If you have interest in this or any role- but your experience doesn't match every qualification of the job description, that's okay- consider applying regardless.

We are an equal-opportunity employer.
